tal 1948. Without a con-stant national emergency, the movements have lost much of their appeal, and unfortunately we don't seem to know how to pre-sent the day's problems to the school generation in such a way as to enlist their active cooperation their active cooperation. The result is time spent at the cinema and on the street corners, and boys who are short of breath, flat of foot and quickly exhausted. If the youth movements can no longer serve, then we must turn to the playing fields used for this purpose in most parts of the world where the physical effort has been taken out of living. ing of the kind already experienced in the United States in this respect.
